GIBSONS RESTRAINING INJUNC.
TION TO OFFSET JUDGMENT

The restraining injunction granted Gibson Bros. mentioned in yesterday's issue of the Daily News, is merely an injunction to offset the plaintiff's judgment until the Gibsons can prosecute their judgment. The Motor Hearse Co., of Richmond, Ind., plaintiffs, sold Gibson Bros. a hearse, which when it came proved to be a second-hand one, according to W. H. Gibson. Gibsons refused to pay the entire price for it and the Motor Hearse Co. sued for $2000 judgment on the Gibson Bros. sued for $5000 judgment charging the Motor Hearse Co. with practicing fraud, and got their judgment. Now each party is endeavoring to collect from the other.

TO ENFORCE SANI-TARY ORDINANCES

Health Officer Hays Plans Three
Day Inspection of Conditions
In Middlesboro

All garbage must be removed from backyards, alleys and other places in the city and placed in containers as provided by city ordinance, according to Dr. George Hays, county physician, who will make a thorough inspection of the sanitary conditions of the city during the next three days. Violators of this ordinance will be given sufficient notice and, should they fail to remedy conditions, will be fined.

The city ordinance reads: "Any persons who throws into any street, avenue or alley any garbage, slops, ashes or other refuse matter, unless same is placed in boxes, barrels or other receptacles for removal by street cars must, on conviction, be fined not less than $1 nor more than $20."

The ordinance providing that a milk shall be sold in Middlesboro unless the seller has a permit is being violated by men coming in here from the country, said Dr. Hays. These will also be subject to a fine should the practice continue. The permits are issued upon application fee of charge. The purpose of the permit is to insure frequent inspections of dairies by the county board of health.

LOW WAGES CAUSE
TEACHER SHORTAGE
SAYS SUPT. COLVIN

Warns Educators Of Increasing
Schools With No Teachers—
Cries Enlistment Of
New Recruits

ASKS BOARD OF EDUCATION
PAY ALL SALARY POSSIBLE

By Associated Press.

FRANKFORT, Feb. 13.—The basis of the present teacher shortage in Kentucky undoubtedly is economic and due to the low salaries now being paid, in the opinion of George Colvin, state superintendent of public instruction, who recently sent out letters to school workers warning them of the impending increase in the number of schools without teachers. Better preparation by present teachers and the enlistment of new recruits is given as a means of meeting the threatened shortage, according to Mr. Colvin.

In spite of the nominal increase in salary, many teachers in Kentucky are now receiving a lower salary than they received in 1915, if we consider the purchasing power of the dollar," said Mr. Colvin. "Many elementary teachers are receiving less than $20 a month after board and other necessary expenses have been paid."

During the year 1922 the certificates of 4,151 elementary teachers will expire, according to Mr. Colvin. Approximately 200 high school certificates also will expire this year. This means that approximately 5,000 teachers must receive certificates during this year if normal vacancies are to be filled, Mr. Colvin stated.

Cooperate to Meet Shortage

"If we are to meet this threatened teacher shortage, if we are to provide a qualified teacher for each teaching position in the state it will require the united efforts of all," said Mr. Colvin. "We must begin a teacher recruiting campaign immediately; we must encourage as many of our high school graduates as possible to enter the profession; we must appeal to our colleges and our university for help in meeting this crisis. We must encourage teachers now teaching to prepare to meet the higher requirements; we must encourage competent teachers now out of that profession to return to the profession."

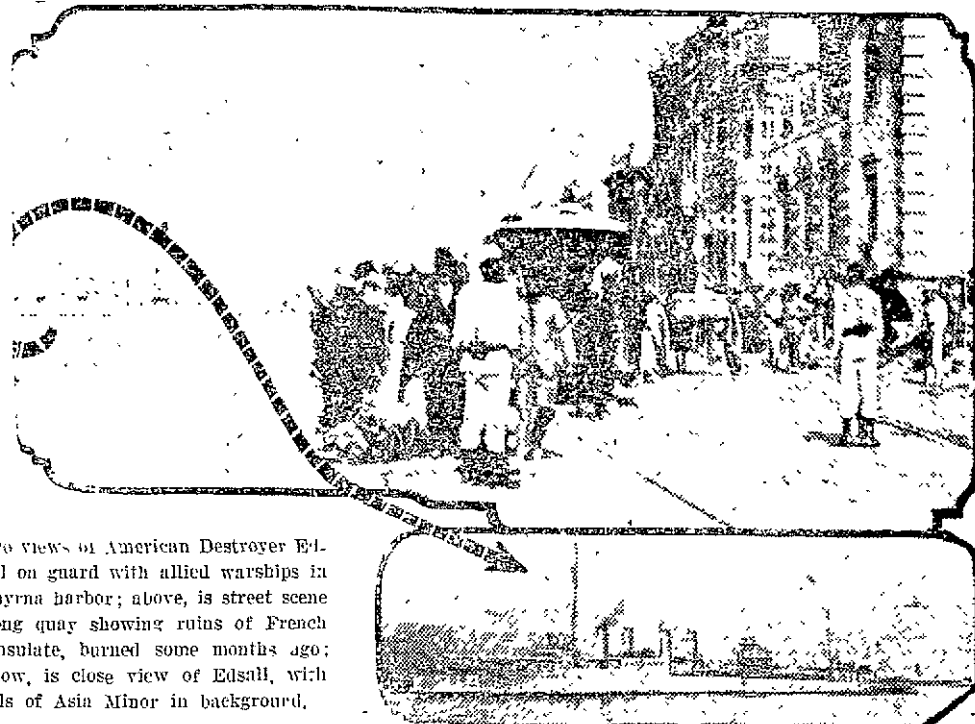

"County boards and city boards of education in preparing the budget for the coming year must devote every possible dollar to the teachers' salary fund. In many cases it will be necessary to postpone building programs and to devote the sums that would have been used for this purpose to supplementing teachers' salaries. It will be necessary to levy the maximum tax in practically every district. You can expect the largest per capita that has been paid in the history of the state; the per capita will not be less than $8.88, salary schedules ought to be adopted as early as possible, and teachers ought to be employed in advance of the opening of the school year."

Encourage Teachers' Training

"County superintendents should encourage all teachers now teaching to enter either the county high school or one of the normal schools immediately upon the close of the rural schools, county boards of education ought to make it possible for teachers to enter high school without tuition. We shall need all the assistance that our high schools and our normal schools can give us. Teachers can meet the academic requirements more economically in local high schools than in any other institution. Principals of high schools in graded school districts ought to solicit the attendance of teachers during the second semester. County superintendents and city superintendents should unite in planning for summer schools."

"Our summer schools proved very popular last year and served a real need; we must have even more summer schools and better attended summer schools than we had last year. We shall need the assistance of more of our best prepared and most successful teachers to teach in these summer schools. Applications for teaching positions should be filed at once with the Department of Education."

"The private schools of the state are making a generous and real contribution towards meeting the teacher shortage. Our normal schools are doing the best work they have ever done."

DISCREDITS TURK-
RUSSO ALLIANCE

Near East Relief Worker Does
Not Expect War in
Smyrna Crisis

By Edward Thierry

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Hope that hostilities will be averted between the Turks and the allies in the dangerous Smyrna crisis was expressed by Chas. V. Vickrey, general secretary of the Near East Relief recently.

Vickrey has just returned from Asia Minor, where he inspected refugee relief being done by America.

"I am inclined to minimize reports of a new war rising out of disputes and ultimatum passing between Turks and European powers," he said. "Our relief workers are there in a non-political capacity and with a viewpoint that is entirely humane. I cannot express opinions that are in any way political."

Twenty-five thousand orphans who are dependent upon the Near East Relief for their daily food are in the Caucasus, outside Turkish territory. Vickrey was asked what the fate might be of these children, caught on the fringe of Russia, in case war flared out of the Smyrna crisis and Russia possibly entered into a military alliance with the Turks.

"Scarcely stories of a possible Russo-Turkish alliance are scarcely credible," he said. "Russia has vast power and resources in men, but her transportation system is in such a broken-down condition that it was seem physically impossible for them to join the Turks."

"Russia is hardly to be considered an important factor in offensive warfare. Her power could be asserted, however, in a defensive way in case she was attacked."

Vickrey spent some time in Smyrna and Constantinople. He said he saw a single ship in Smyrna harbor that had carried 27,000 refugees away to Greece. In one voyage 11,500 persons were carried.

"In one ramshackle building in Constantinople," he said. "I saw 300 newly made orphans whom our relief workers had picked up in the streets and abandoned homes of the single town of Ordu, in Asia Minor."

MAN KILLED SUNDAY AT STRAIGHT CREEK

Trouble Over Sale of Whisky—
Slayer Surrenders, Says
Self Defense

Fred Moore was shot and killed at Straight Creek Sunday afternoon by Mike Howard. The trouble arose over the refusal of Howard to sell Moore whisky.

According to the reports received from there, Moore went to the home of Howard at Straight Creek and asked to buy some whisky. Howard told him that he did not have any. An argument arose and Moore drew his revolver and fired once at Howard. The latter, who was unarmed at the time, went into his house, got his rifle and shot Moore, inflicting a wound from which he died.

Howard later telephoned to Martin Coker, Sheriff, and asked to be arrested. Sheriff Green was unable to go to the home of Howard yesterday on account of the high water. He expected to make the arrest some time today.

Mike Howard is a prominent farmer of Straight Creek. Moore was noted for horse swapping. People of that vicinity all know him by the name of "Horse Swapping" Moore and were unable to give any other name.

REEVES LINCOLN DAY SPEAKER

Local Pastor Makes Chief Address
On Program at L. M. U.

Yesterday

"Lincoln is great not for what he did but for what he was," declared the Rev. A. B. Reeves, pastor of the local Christian church, in an address at Lincoln Memorial University yesterday. The address was part of the program celebrating the school's twenty-sixth birthday.

Lincoln is a mystery, Mr. Reeves said in beginning, a figure which neither heredity, nor environment, nor anything to which human development is generally due, can explain. He seemed to be sent for his special mission like Joan of Arc. Developing this character, Mr. Reeves spoke of Lincoln's great wit and humor, "the oil of his machinery," (the weapon with which he met the thrusts and criticisms which he found on every turn when he was president. Last of all, the speaker talked of Lincoln, the high priest, telling of his daily prayers for his country, how he bore the nation's sorrows and carried its burdens on his own shoulders. Common sense, honesty, unflinching judgment of human nature and an inexhaustible supply of humor were the qualities which explained the man Lincoln, Mr. Reeves said in summing up.

WILL THE BOOT-LEGGERS STAY?
Recent invasions of local alleged bootlegging circles by Federal prohibition officers has given a different turn to the matter and has made offenders sit up and think. These officers are no respecters of person and their purpose is to find who is selling liquor here, regardless of what this person's political prestige may be.
Crime and lawlessness have been so much less in Middleboro in the past few years since the open saloon went out that it is hard for visitors who knew the old Middleboro to realize that it is the same town. So, too, are poverty, illiteracy and other attending results of whisky, reduced. But the fact remains that there is still great room for improvement in Middleboro and Bell county in these matters and there will be as long as moonshine whisky is made and sold here. This is recognized as the great evil of the mountain country, the thing until it is eradicated, which will keep this people in poverty, ignorance and degeneracy.
The bootlegger and the moonshiner are the greatest present day menace, because they are offenders against humanity, against moral law and against the constitution. Their only possible excuse for existence is that they can sell their wares at such a splendid profit. Yet any of them will admit that there is little money in it, that they could make practically as much honestly if they wanted to.
If a bootlegging ring exists in Middleboro it is the moral and civil duty of all good citizens to unite to combat it. There is scarcely a man in town who can not tell you at least two or three places where liquor may be bought, but he forgets it straightway when called before the grand jury. If he doesn't think local authorities can handle the situation, he knows Federal authorities can, and it is his duty to give them what information he has.
Middleboro can rid itself of bootlegging if she wants to. It remains to be seen whether she wants to.

RELATIVITY MADE EASY
Relativity, as conceived by Dr. Albert Einstein and understood by himself and, as yet, only twelve others is lucidly explained in a motion picture exhibit. The first presentation of the picture was given in a New York theater, and from all accounts everything went along well, with one exception. Nobody could gather what it meant.
The theory of relativity was demonstrated, presumably, by illustrations showing the bending of light. For instance, the picture showed to impress upon the audience the fact that a cannon ball dropped from the top of a building falls straight to the earth, yet describes an arc because the earth rotates 1,000 miles an hour. As a result, the point at the foot of the tower has moved a great distance in the interim between dropping the ball and the time it reaches the ground. The arc is there, the theory insists, but it is invisible.
Numerous other illustrations were given designed to furnish the lay mind with an understanding of the Einstein theory. That the audience failed to grasp it can well be understood. It has baffled greater minds than that of the average motion picture devotee. That the audience nodded its head in approval can be taken only as an indication of the gaucheness of the average American.—Winchester Sun.

THE PAST
By Berton Braley
"Girls ain't the same as the girls I knew."
The dowager says, and sighs.
"Those old-time maidens would never do
A thing that would cause surprise."
But she failed to recall on a large degree,
Some things which she saw occur—
Girls ain't the same as they used to be,
And they never were!
"Men ain't the same as the men of old."
The old man said, with a scowl.
But he didn't know that the cave man held,
Had put up a similar howl.
And they both were right in their sad decree,
To which we can still demur.
With "men ain't at all what they used to be,
And they never were!"
The past is ever a golden time,
When it's many a year away,
And the folks who're pretty well past their prime
Are always agast at today!
And they're right, of course, as you plainly see,
In the judgments that they aver
But "Times ain't at all what they used to be,"
And they never were!

Adventures of The Twins
By Olive Roberts Barton

"Goodness!" exclaimed Nancy one day when she was helping Mr. Stamp, the fairy postman, to sort the letters in the hickory tree postoffice. Here's a letter for me! It looks like a valentine. Yes, sir! It's got hearts and flowers all over it. Who do you suppose it's from?"
She read it over to herself and then called to Nick and Mr. Stamp and Mr. Stridealong Longstride, the other little fairy to hear it. Here's what it said:
"Whose hair is like the morning sun?
Whose sweet blue eyes are full of fun?
Whose mouth is curved like Cupid's bow?
Whose skin is soft as fallen snow?
Why, Nancy's!
Whose heart is brave and knows no fear,
Whose eyes are bright and know no tear.
Who aids the weak against the strong
And who helps the fairy folk along?
Why, Nancy.
Who travels round from Moon to Mars,
A-keeping order 'mongst the stars?
Who goes with Nick far out to sea,
Then back to land in time for tea?
Why, Nancy!
"Who'll be my valentine, I pray,
And come to visit me some day,
And talk about the news and weather?
That splendid times we'll have together!
Why, Nancy—I hope."

"Now then who do you suppose sent me that?" wondered Nancy. I'm not as nice as that! My hair isn't like the sun and my eyes aren't like—well what it says."
"I know who sent it. I know!"

"You're more welcome right this minute than ever you've been before," Kate called to Latham as he drove into the yard.
"And to what do I owe the welcome?" He smiled as he approached.
"To the fact that I'm going to ask a favor of you."
"Ah—ha! I thought so! There's always a fly in the ointment—some-where." The smile vanished as Latham spoke.
"What is it Kate?" he asked.

She wondered if that had made the change in him. Had he known she had? Had she convinced him with that lie that she never could love another and was he accepting the fact?
Quite a space elapsed before she answered his question. When she did, she told him of the newspaper story, of the picture she had found and of their strange connection.
"Have you the picture with you?" Latham questioned.
Kate took the circular bit of paper from her purse and handed it to him. "Rather a good-looking chap—not familiar though," was Latham's comment.
"And you want to go to the morgue to see the body?" he asked.

Our Millinery Department is to be one of the most complete in our store. Miss Gill who will have charge of the department is now in Cincinnati getting the latest modes and ideas for hats and trimming.

She will be here within a very few days to give you the millinery news. We have felt the need of having an up-to-the-minute department for millinery in our store for some time. We are certain that the women of Middleboro will welcome this announcement.

Miss Gill is an expert milliner and will not only sell hats but will trim or make hats after your own suggestion.

You will find our hats at a reasonable price and the best the market affords. This is the aim of our millinery department.

It will pay you to wait for the return of Miss Gill before buying your hat for spring.
